

Food Allergies and Food Intolerance

As a leading and responsible catering company, we must comply with food safety laws. We want to serve meals made with quality, freshly produced ingredients that meet food safety and hygiene standards and are enjoyable, balanced, and safe to eat. Harrison recognises that some children may have an allergic reaction or intolerance to one or more commonly eaten foods and has robust processes to assist the school in managing allergens.

Please click here www.harrisoncatering.co.uk/food-allergies-food-intolerances for our full Food Allergies and Food Intolerances policy and more information.

As part of our policy, if your child has a food allergy or food intolerance, you must send a completed Food Allergy & Food Intolerance Form to the school office, for us to serve them.

This is required so that you can:

- confirm the ingredient to which your child has an allergy or intolerance,
- produce evidence from a medical professional confirming the food allergy or food intolerance,
- give the school permission to provide a current photograph of your child to the school kitchen, along with your completed form, and
- confirm you will update the school about any changes to your child's allergy or intolerance.

A completed Food Allergy & Food Intolerance Form allows the school and Harrison to:

- understand the severity of the allergy; and
- put a process in place so that your child is identified when being served with food. This will include the school providing a current photograph of your child to the school kitchen.

We will work with the school to ensure that food allergies and intolerances are managed in your child's best interests. Please be assured that any personal data will be processed in accordance with our privacy policy which can be found on the company's website www.harrisoncatering.co.uk

Yours sincerely
